

Monday, October 11, 2004
AP (Asskicking Party) News Service

NORTH TEXAS REGION DECLARED FEDERAL EMERGENCY PARTY ZONE; HALLOECTION PARTY PLANNED

RVDOG Halloween Party Reinstated, Reinterpreted To Encompass Election Day: Halloection Day

Getuplicans and Getdownocrats Join Together in Rare Bipartasin Endorsement of Tha Shizzle

PLANO, TX, OCTOBER 11, 2004, AP: RSVDog Entertainment (formerly RVDog Entertainment) announced today that after a two-year hiatus, the RSVDog Halloween Party will once again be held in 2004, starting at 9 p.m. on November 6, at their global entertainment complex in Plano, Texas.

This year, the party has been dubbed the “Halloection Day Party”, since its timing reflects a desire on the civic-minded partners of RSVDog to inject the party atmosphere with a measure of patriotism.

“We have always striven to provide our guests with a nonpartisan, intellectually-oriented party atmosphere; when we realized the proximity of Halloween, that giant masquerade, to the election, after we congratulated ourselves for slipping in that subtle bit of irony that we’re confident fully 51% of our guests wouldn’t have to have pointed out to them, we decided that we should celebrate both: we’re calling it ‘the Halloection Party, 2004’,” Said Russ Urquhart, CCO (Chief Costume Officer) of RSVD.

“We are quite proud of the fact that both the Getuplicans and the Getdownocrats support this party, which we fully intend to be a nonpartisan event. We at RSVD do not endorse candidates or issue positions on any controversial topics. We are completely impartial,” he continued.

“Death to Whitey,” Urquhart added.

Guests are invited to wear costumes and to be prepared to Get Down Wit Dey Bad Selfs. Refreshments, food, and music will be provided. Guests are encouraged to bring additional refreshments and food of all varieties to share.

“We are working to build a rainbow coalition of refreshments,” said Vince Cavasin, RSVD CRO (Chief Refreshment Officer). “During its 10-year run, the RVDog party attained a reputation as a veritable Refreshments Petri Dish; there's hardly a party refreshment in existence that wasn't served at one of those parties. One year, we even served something that made these women look attractive."

Bootsy Collins, Chairman of the bipartisan PATRIOT (Party And Take Refreshments In Our Towns) committee, endorses the RSVDog party

"These chicks were H-O-T!" –RSVD CRO, Vince Cavasin (Chief Music Officer). "We intend to take that shizzeeee-it to another level at the Halloection party this year. And I should note, Vince will not be allowed near the DJ booth at this party."

"Rest assured, neither will there be a Burning Sensation Unplugged reprise as long as I'm CMO," added Beheshti.

But the RSVD Halloection Party promises more than just the get down, funky grooves that put the "ahhhhhhhh" in "Pahhhhhhhhtay". Explains Urquhart, the event has spiritual roots.

"The time around Halloween is traditionally known as the festival of the Party God Zoltar," says Urquhart, adopting a tone of reverence. "It is not commonly known that Zoltar was also the god of elections, so this is a special year spiritually for us at RSVDog Entertainment."

"This party is both a chance to, if you will, 'get Bizzy Wit Tha Nizzy', and to pay your respects to the mythological figure to whom we owe our greatest gifts as a society: the right to vote and the right to G-G-G-Get Up and Get-Get Dooooooooooooooooown!"

The hosts also request that given the solemn nature of this event, all guests be at least of voting age.

RSVD requests perspiring attendees to RSVP.

"So anyway," Cavasin continued, "we definitely dig refreshments."

The RSVDog Partners promise that the party will deliver not only an enchanting array of refreshments, it will provide a fun, friendly environment in which to Shizzle Tha Nizzle.

"The RVDog Parties had a long history of creating an environment conducive to Tha Shizzle," said Sudi Beheshti, RSVD's CMO

Zoltar, god of Parties and Elections; wants you to party with RSVD on November 6, 2004!